The Entitlement Frameworks

The Entitlement Frameworks incorporate all the current elements of statutory Health Education and Relationships and Sex Education, as well as PSHE Association guidance for Personal, Social and Health Education and extend to cover Citizenship, Economic Wellbeing and specific elements relating to Personal Safety and Safeguarding in Key Stages 3 and 4.

The Frameworks are organised in colour coded strands, and the Framework Cells contain questions that young people of that age are entitled to have the opportunity to think, talk and learn about at their stage of development and maturity. RSE sits within the Healthy & Safer Lifestyles strand, and also has clear links to content within the Myself & My Relationships strand.

The box in each Cell lists some of the probable “content” that will help children address the questions. It is not assumed that schools will provide separate learning activities for each Framework “Cell” - some activities will cover more than one. There is also extensive opportunity for Framework coverage through cross-curricular provision.

Schools use the Frameworks to reflect on the quality and coverage of the current programme, to think about progression and plan for development and extension of their programmes.
